

Where to Find Military Talent

What is this about?

Finding qualified military talent can be challenging for companies that are in the early stages of implementing a veteran employment initiative. After the initial commitment to hire veterans is made, the first step is often where to find them and to ensure they fit well into our respective workforce. Wading through the multitude of job candidate sources and tools can be ineffective and often labor intensive when creating our talent pipelines.

Since the inception of the Military Programs & Veteran Affairs Office, the members of our Military Recruitment Team (MRT) have evaluated many sources in their own recruiting efforts, informally sharing the ones that met their talent needs. As a community of practice, it became evident that by leveraging the MRT's collective knowledge, we could serve a greater purpose in accelerating veteran recruiting efforts both within our strategic partners and beyond. The following is the combined experience of our members in creating a repository list, segmented into familiar categories that will help users' find the right talent, with the right fit, at the right time:

1. Resources without an Associated Cost
2. Resources that have a Fee
3. ACAP / TAP / Military Programs
4. Career and Job Fair Resources
5. Job Boards
6. Military Organizations / Associations
7. Government Agencies & Programs
8. LinkedIn Groups

Why is it useful?

The complexity and volume of sourcing military talent can vary greatly from one employer to the next, from one state to the next, from one industry to the next, but often revolves around the above categories in the context of how recruiting gets done. The key differentiating factor is providing a unique and credible starting point for end users to select the most productive places that help accelerate and ultimately fulfill their talent needs over time.

Who would use it?

- Centralized organizations who are looking for the basic building blocks to support their strategy
- Talent acquisition and recruiting professionals who seek to build and supplement their talent pipelines
- Workforce professionals who seek to support and enhance their workforce initiatives
- Small businesses and not-for-profits that need to quickly and effectively access military talent for their immediate needs
- Transitioning military and veterans who want to indirectly connect with veteran friendly employers
